

These Are Different Times

Since 2011, I've advertised in every issue of the Eagle Magazine. This time, it feels right to use this page to express my appreciation and gratitude for all we have living in Eagle. A little while ago, we knew a different life. Businesses were thriving everywhere and the season was in bloom.

Spring has always been my favorite time of the year. It's when I've watched my kids play baseball and softball here in Eagle over the last 20 years. Like many of you, my life changed when the baseball fields sat empty and the restaurants and shops that are part of our small community were closed. (I suddenly became the mom of two middle-school "home-schoolers".)

As I reflect on life in Eagle today, I appreciate the increased sense of community and family interaction. It makes me happy to see people riding bikes, walking, and spending quality time together. I'm thankful we live in such an amazing place where we encourage each other through uncertain times.

I've been in the real estate business since 2005. I'm grateful for the relationships and friends made throughout the years. No matter what question you may have about Eagle, I'm happy to be a resource.
